

Open Position Announcement:

Research and Teaching Assistant / Doctorate in Communication Sciences

The Institute of Marketing and Communication Management (IMCA) at the University of Lugano (USI), Faculty of Communication Sciences, has opened a call for a teaching and research assistant in the area of Organizational Communication.

We offer an opportunity for a keen person to work on managerially relevant research in organizational communication, to interact with an international network of scholars in the field and to become a credible member of the university's community.

The position is fully funded for a minimum of three years. During this period the appointee will undertake his/her doctoral studies. He/she will collaborate in a small research team, which investigates the practices of organizational communication in particular with relation to knowledge processes, organizational learning, and risk.

The ideal candidate will possess a master degree in communication sciences, business administration, or related disciplines. Fluency in written and spoken English is a must. Good knowledge of German is an advantage.

The research and teaching assistant activities will be carried out in Lugano, Switzerland, where the candidate should take residence.

Contact:

Please send your application, incl. detailed CV (with 2 references), university grade transcripts, and a letter of motivation electronically to Jeanne Mengis, mengisi@usi.ch

Deadline:

The call is open until the position is filled, but envisaged to be appointed as soon as possible.